Arici For all intents and purposes, Deb never recovered from the divorce. Too much had happened to her too fast—the new school, the move, the sudden loss of her mother who died in a car accident a few months after the divorce. Deb was only twelve years old when her father walked out on her and her mother. All Deb wants is to have a normal life, a real life, one where things are simple and predictable. A life where she's not living with her father, where she doesn't have to worry about her Mom's new boyfriend. A life that's like living in a fairy tale. Then she meets David. Beautiful, wild, beautiful David. He's dangerous, magnetic, and he can do things with her that no one else has been able to do. Unfortunately, David doesn't believe Deb is safe. After a terrifying encounter with him in a park Deb wakes up to discover she was in a mental institution. She remembers the accident that killed her mother and her father leaving her in the hands of strangers, and a terrible nightmare that left Deb with no memory of her past. But everything she's built in her dreams is suddenly shattered. Deb is certain she's had a breakthrough in understanding the horror of her life but she's still alone. No one will listen to her. Deb is terrified. But she's desperate to find the strength to change everything around her, to live as a free-born human being, without the fear of violence
