You have tried everything to increase the speed of your PC, yet no matter how fast you try to increase the performance, you just can't seem to get it to a certain level. The best thing you can do to speed up your computer is to first figure out which part of the system is taking so long to respond to your commands. For instance, if your internet browser is sluggish, it is likely that the browser is the culprit. You could ask some of your fellow users about how they fix their browser and, even though it doesn't help you resolve the issue, you could possibly find a solution that can make your PC start and respond quickly. With WinExt System Optimizer, you can resolve a large number of issues that can make your PC run slower. For instance, if you see that your system is slow to boot and load, you can download and install WinExt System Optimizer. Once you have it, you will be able to detect all the issues that might be causing the sluggish response time. You will have to look for slow startup and shutdown, slow response time and slow disk access. If you have slow internet speed, you will be able to set your modem to use a faster connection. To do this, you can click on the Windows tool, right click on the modem and choose the option "set as default". You will also be able to detect network speed issues. Once you have detected the issue, you can pick and choose the best fix for your computer. You will find there are many options to choose from, such as the option "optimize startup and shutdown". You can also find the option "optimize web browser" which is likely to improve your internet speed. You will find a setting that allows you to "fix registry", a setting that is meant to clean out your system. You will be able to set up your PC to auto detect or improve the security of your Windows, something that will increase your confidence in your system. If you think your system is broken, you can install WinExt System Optimizer and use it to detect and fix all the issues that have made your system respond slowly. You can even get your system to perform like new by using the option "rebuild registry". This will eliminate any remnant issues that you might have on your system.
