From a technical perspective, Photoshop is a desktop publishing program (DTP) that is also used by all kinds of graphic designers—from hobbyists to professional firms. And as such, the program was developed to handle a wide variety of tasks including transferring and editing files, adding layers, editing color and tone, using sophisticated spot healing tools, performing multiple tasks, and even creating and editing PDF files. But Photoshop isn't just a picture-editing program. It's one of the best general-purpose image-editing programs that also enables you to do a lot of other things. For example, you can create sophisticated documents and perform many kinds of basic retouching and post-processing. You can crop, rotate, and modify digital photographs and create composites. You can work with negative images and manage layers. You can create animations and video. You can print and do various prepress tasks. And in addition to these tasks, you can create all kinds of graphics. Photoshop isn't just a picture-editing program. It's one of the best general-purpose image-editing programs that also enables you to do a lot of other things. After you get used to Photoshop, you're going to want to do everything you can to become proficient at it. Getting Started Photoshop is an incredibly powerful tool for photographers and other designers who want to create and manipulate image files—including both still images and digital video. Throughout this book, we show you how to manipulate files, from basic color correction and illustration creation through retouching and compositing. In addition to the exercises and projects throughout this book, you can also get a lot of help from Adobe's comprehensive online tutorials. Avian tuberculosis as a problem in Lebanon. Following an outbreak of avian tuberculosis in poultry and its subsequent importation to Lebanon, a study was carried out at Beirut Veterinary College to establish the magnitude of the problem in small-scale poultry production. Results indicated a moderate rate of serological prevalence with no aetiological agent being isolated. The outbreak was associated with a high level of mortality in breeder stocks and the presence of tuberculosis in imported birds was demonstrated. The serological findings were suggestive of relatively high levels of infection in the flocks with no clear evidence of infection in feed, or drinking-water.

Iran The effectiveness of micronutrient plus calcium supplementation on maternal and offspring serum minerals and bone mineral accrual in preterm infants fed with infant formula in the first 6 weeks of life. The aim of this study was to examine the effectiveness of a micronutrient supplementation plus calcium (CA) dietary intervention on maternal and offspring serum minerals and bone mineral accrual in preterm infants fed with infant formula in the first 6 weeks of life. Eighty-six preterm infants born at 24 weeks gestation (mean \pm SD) or less were randomized to receive either a micronutrient plus CA supplement

(N = 43) or a placebo (N = 43) in a double-blinded and randomly ordered manner. At 0, 6, 14, and 26 weeks of age, blood samples were taken and anthropometric and bone mineral values were measured. The results showed that growth velocity, birth weight, and bone mineral content (BMC) were not affected by the intervention. However, the serum Ca, phosphorus, and 25-hydroxyvitamin D (25(OH)D) increased from baseline in both the intervention and control groups at weeks 6 and 14, whereas serum folate and magnesium decreased from baseline at week 14 in both the intervention and control groups. Only serum 25(OH)D remained significantly higher in the intervention group after adjusting for baseline levels at weeks 6, 14, and 26 (P = 0.05). BMC increased significantly between baseline and week 14 in both groups, but remained lower than that of

Development of a questionnaire to assess barriers to HIV postexposure prophylaxis use. To develop a questionnaire to evaluate barriers to HIV postexposure prophylaxis (PEP) use that uses a mixed-methods approach. Methods of mixed-methods research are used to develop a questionnaire with the following components: literature review, qualitative interviews with HIV PEP users, and cognitive interviews with HIV PEP users. Methodological quality of the mixed-methods research was assessed using the Mixed Methods Appraisal Tool (MMAT) for the complete questionnaire. Pretesting was conducted in-person, via telephone and email. The questionnaire was revised based on pretest feedback and the MMAT. The complete questionnaire was administered to HIV PEP users. The MMAT showed five eligible MMAT items, indicating the mixed-methods research was of high methodological quality. Pretesting helped identify issues related to the items. After revision, the questionnaire was administered to a convenience sample of HIV PEP users, which resulted in good response rates to all items ($\geq 90\%$). Exploratory factor analysis showed items belonging to the same factor. The barriers (and enablers) to HIV PEP use were: perceived risk of transmission, duration of time to seek HIV PEP, previous HIV knowledge, provider availability/quality, family support, and stigma. This study provides a validated questionnaire with items that can be used in future studies aimed at understanding barriers to HIV PEP use, and potential intervention development.

1. Field of the Invention
The present invention relates to a semiconductor device and a method for producing the same, in particular, to a semiconductor device which is improved in reliability and a method for producing the same.

2. Description of the Background Art
In an analog integrated circuit, a capacitor is used in order to function as a stray capacitor and a capacity. The semiconductor devices used for forming capacitors are mainly formed using an oxide film or a nitride film as a dielectric film. Especially, a metal-insulator-semiconductor (MIS) capacitor using a polycrystalline silicon film as a first electrode is frequently employed as an element of a large capacity memory such as a DRAM. As the insulating film for forming MIS capacitors, an oxide film is generally used. On the other hand, it is known that when the polycrystalline silicon film having high electrical conductivity is used as a first electrode, a capacity is decreased by increasing the capacitor
