* The Blob A square or rectangle that is a clone of a smaller area (a Blob) is placed on top of another image. The original image is cropped to the top-left corner of the Blob. * Crop Tool The Crop Tool enables you to crop an image to a preset size. You can drag the tool through the Crop Region to place a marquee selection around the cropped portion. You can also drag the tool over the original image and select areas of the original image that you want to remain unmodified. * Elliptical Marquee A small oval or ellipse provides a marquee selection that can be used to crop an image or to select a small area. * Filter The Filter panel is the most common way to perform image alteration. The Filter panel has thumbnail groups with many different filters, including: * Filters that modify the image * Filters that color correct images * Filters that apply noise reduction * Filters that sharpen or sharpen selectively * * * #

Using the Layers dialog box To open the Layers dialog box, choose Layer⇒Layer from the main menu or click the Layers icon at the bottom of the tools panel. The Layers dialog box appears, as shown in Figure 10.1. The Layers dialog box initially displays the thumbnail of a layer below the photoshop window. However, by clicking the thumbnail of the selected layer, you can see the Layers panel on the right side of the window, shown in Figure 10.1. You can add layers, modify layers, or delete layers from the Layers panel. FIGURE 10.1 The Layers panel enables you to:

- * Add, modify, or delete layers
- * Order the layers
- * Hide or show a layer

When working in Photoshop, there is no need to deal with the Layers panel. However, some advanced users may choose to work in the Layers panel because it provides many more features for working with layers. When you work with individual layers, you modify the Layers panel and the layer grouping also appears in the Layers panel. ## Changing the Brush Settings The Brush is the primary tool used to create shapes and to paint onto the canvas, which is the area in your image that you

Q: What is the difference between file descriptor and file in Java? I'm designing a protocol between two processes on two machines A and B. As an optimization I want to use files. To do that, I'm using a socket connection between A and B. I'm using Selector (select(..)) to register a read and write event on the files associated with the socket. The problem is that I have some doubt about the type of file that is being used here. The documentation says that the file descriptor is an integer in Java, but the section describes a file as a path to a file. What is the difference between these two concepts? Why do I need to use a file, when I can store some data in a file descriptor? A: FileDescriptor is a Java interface that defines methods to be implemented by any file descriptor. If you want to work with files in Java, using a FileDescriptor with a File is a good way to go. A FileDescriptor is just a normal object (like an int), but it has some methods (like read, write, seek...) that can be used on any file. You have to be careful though, FileDescriptor are just values, they can be any kind of "file" and that can be read or written (depending on the method) to. But depending on what you really want to do, a file might be overkill. /* * Copyright (C) 2010 Google Inc.
