What's new in Cosmic Flow: A Relaxing VR Experience:

Noodle Jump is a puzzle video game first released for the Nokia N-Gage and also released for the Windows Phone 7 and iOS platforms, developed by Gameloft and published by Gameloft Europe in European markets. The game was announced and released for the PlayStation Portable in the PAL region on July 5, 2006. It is the first N-Gage port of a console game. The game was one of the few games to make full use of high resolution and 3D features of the Nokia N-Gage platform. The graphics are very similar to those seen in Brain Challenge, released for the same system. Gameplay As the player progresses through each scenario, waves of rice balls will keep coming at the player, with one or two jumping in a series, and the player has to catch them for points. More rice balls might also bounce off the screen and the player needs to catch these as well. Along with the rice balls, there are also bombs. In each scenario, a set number of bombs should be caught for the maximum available score. Bombs will be coming from three different types - red ones, white ones and blue ones. Around every 10m, additional bombs will start to appear at random places along the background. Bubbles, which multiply the score whenever they appear, can also be collected along the way, but they decrease the score by one point only, instead of multiplicative. Once bubbles are collected, they can be placed into a bubble dock, and if bubbles are successfully caught in this dock, they will multiply their score. For every 50m of falling down and catching the rice balls, the mini-game gauge will increase one level. If the player jumps into any enemy balls, they will instantly lose one life, and if 5 levels of the gauge are reached before time is over, they lose the game. The high score table (which is shown when the player clicks on their name in the lower right corner) only updates every minute. Environments The 16 levels of puzzle gameplay featured in the game are inspired by existing video games and famous movies. Some of the levels are: Planet Fame - This is a homage to the game Earthworm Jim. Ted Talk - A parody of the Ted-Spears talk Family Guy style. Ice Princess - This is a homage to the movie Snow White and the Seven Dwarves. Avalokitesvara - Based on the inspiration and title of the movie Memento
