AUGUSTA — A state committee on Tuesday endorsed medical marijuana as a legitimate therapy, reversing course on a vote taken in the past. It's not clear yet if a final vote on legislation to make cannabis a conditionally-approved medical therapy is scheduled. "The committee has decided that it is within the discretion of physicians to authorize patient treatment using marijuana under all or part of the 21 conditions that have been developed under (Maine's) medical marijuana statute," said a statement from the Medical Marijuana Caregivers' Commission. The statement from the committee, which makes recommendations to the Medical Use of Marijuana Commission, said recommendations must go through the commission's advisory committee for a full vote. "There is no formal process to take a decision on medical marijuana to the governor, but the co-chairs of the advisory committee will work on a timeframe for such a decision in advance of any formal action on the bill," said a statement from the Office of Policy and Management, which oversees the commission. The bill is expected to next go before the medical use commission for a full vote and the Maine Senate. A proposal to set up a sales tax for the medical marijuana program awaits action by the state Legislature. It was tabled for a vote Tuesday by the revenue committee, but will go to the full Legislature in the interim. The tax is expected to be near the top of the list of budget priorities when lawmakers resume work in December. The Legislature is not scheduled to go into special session. The medical marijuana legislation was last year's top legislative priority, but was tied up in the process of deciding whether to expand the numbers of providers who can be certified to grow and distribute the plant. The change was an effort to keep up with the changing medical needs of patients. The new law will allow qualifying patients to buy marijuana from licensed caregivers rather than from approved providers. The law will allow the use of extracts, edibles and topicals, though not currently prescribed medications. The bill would not allow marijuana to be used to treat other drugs or to be smoked in the same pipe as tobacco. Q: Create a proxy for a list of IPs I have a list of IPs, e.g: 192.168.0.1, 192.168.0.2,.... I need to create a proxy that forwards all requests to a specific host only to those IPs. E.g: if request is: www.stackoverflow.com -> 192.168.0.1 if request is: www.youtube.com -> 192.168.0.2 if request is: www.google.com -> 192.168.0.3 ... I was looking at Squid, Varnish and Nginx, but nothing simple enough to set it up quickly. I can write a script that will do it, but I am looking for something I can use right away. I am using Linux server so if there is a daemon solution, no matter what language, that will work, that's fine. A: I believe iptables would work fine for this. You can use the following iptables rule to forward all traffic from a specific IP to a specific port to an interface: iptables -t nat -A OUTPUT -p tcp --dport 80 -j DNAT --to-destination 192.168.0.1:80 The -t nat type is required to make it work. If you want to add new IPs to it, you can do so with the iptables-restore command. If you want to be able to do it from the command line you could write some sort of shell script to do it. You can use the following script to list all interfaces, and then iterate through the lines and add them as needed: #!/bin/bash ## Enter network interface details interface=your_eth0 ## Fetch current iptables rules cur_rules=$(iptables -t nat -L) ## Start iptables adding new rules echo "iptables -t nat -A OUTPUT -p tcp --dport 80 -j DNAT --to-destination 192.168.0.1:80" >> Scur_rules echo "iptables -t nat -A OUTPUT -p tcp --dport 80 -j DNAT --to-destination 192.168.0.2:80" >> Scur_

Wrap up: I usually never write about the first release of the year. I normally just wait for a few months for new titles to come out. I'm a bit different for this release. I'm here to tell you that this is the best first release of the year for sure. There is a huge value in this first release with the whole game and DLC included. This is a huge selling point for me to be honest. I want this on my shelf to show my friends that I started the year off
