"I think that the way to expect future of video games to be shaped, is to start thinking of it as an art form.
And not a medium that just tries to provide entertainment at the highest level, but as an art that makes the players feel and see things -as if they are genuinely engaged in another world. "

Wes Scrimin, College of Charleston

Finally the day has arrived When I am taken from the depths of my lair Out into the chosen wasteland I deserve no explanation or reason I simply want my life to begin...]]>

What's new:

He's on his way. And the launch of Nintendo 3DS might be particularly well timed: the DreamWorks Animation CEO just joined the board of Game City, the newly formed, Shoreditch-based gaming and digital media business that has been set up to operate Studio Liverpool's console and handheld development studio, Project Cafe, to finance the three-way production of three Game Boy iPhone apps (Yoshi's Nutshell, Minis and Mario Party Dreamscape) and the impending release of Squid Ink's Surfing Birds. Geraint has spent the past 24 months living and breathing the gaming business from its design, development and innovation stages through to its multi-million pound investments, having initially helped co-found Psygnosis Games (mouse-based title Zone of the Enders) before later becoming managing director of Goldbird and establishing himself at Medal Games (Joystiq reports). His focus will be on rolling out the business and securing private investors to fund Game City's publishing, graphics, content creation and distribution plans, with a particular emphasis on growing the team and the studios' output. Hopefully, he'll have some new announcements to report in a couple of weeks. "I'm excited about being at Game City," Geraint tells Eurogamer. "I just can't tell you how excited I am. We have a really well-resourced team right now and if we're able to build on that we can become a real leader in the digital media and content industry. I'm just aiming to grow what we have built here at the studio and make that even better. It's great to be part of this guys - and glad to be part of their team." There are a couple of key factors that will determine the strength and future direction of Game City. The first is getting funding from the right source and securing the right investors. The second is servicing that investment with the teams at Project Cafe and Studio Liverpool to begin turning out the products now increasingly ready to move from the prototype to the market. If those pieces are put in place, Geraint believes the future of digital content and content creation is bright for those who live and breathe gaming. The video game industry is an inherently conservative, slow-moving, B2B business in which concepts are refined, tested, coded, and then eventually tested again and again and again before it crosses over into the mainstream market. Game development teams currently kick their ideas around in teams of around 10 people under the leadership of a

Recommended Specifications: To experience all the fun and adventure of Digital Diva, we recommend: Q: How to get an action bonus to damage? The MCG site says that the action bonus is increased by the appropriate bonuses when dealing with a creature. While it's clear that increasing your ability to hit is important, the difference between attacks of opportunity and regular attacks has me confused about the action bonus. If you only get an AO, your action bonus cannot be increased to account for the
