Q: do i need to create a new keystore and generate a new public and private key for my application in Android Studio? I am creating an app with a server, where user upload their images and can send a text message to the server. The images and texts are encrypted, only the server can decrypt them. My question is, do I have to create a new keystore file and generate a new public and private key for my application. I have read in other questions that the keystore file is different from the project folder, and I cannot find any keystore files in my main project folder. A: Keystore file is a type of file that contain private and public key for that particular app/device. You need to create new keystore file inorder to create new keys. Not required. It is optional. Android developer android login is only required to complete configuration. It doesn't need keystore file.
