SONOHIGURASHI VS. TOUHOU UNIVERSE Game Review:

Never mind the fact that this is actually a King of Fighters game! What's worse is that Touhou is dressed up like King of Fighters in this title! Instead, we get a Fighting game, but an anime style game! Yes, this can't possibly be real, you say? What makes it even worse is that any of it, even the fighting, if we want to be honest, is just more costumes atop yet another fighting game! Everything from a SAI-based meter system to KOF wacky special moves... there isn't much that can be done within the formula of the Touhou Universe. In fact, you're not even playing a fighting game. You've been tricked into playing a game with exciting (especially to a dork like me) cut scenes and interesting cut-ins to the fighting, all in the hopes of something a bit more interesting! Not only that, but Sonohigurashi actually wears the shirt of the characters in the game. Wait... scratch that. Who doesn't wear the shirt of a virtual fighter?!?!

The plot for this game is what gives it most of the flavor at the beginning. It is blatantly adapting the storyline of those SNES Touhou games, which is a good thing, for how funny they are. I guess without giving too much away, Sonohigurashi suddenly finds himself losing most of his clothes and becoming a... Sour Grapes? Grapes which turn into vinegared water if they touch fruit? How did I get away with that... the purpose of the game key is to avenge Tokimine (the important character), who must then re-battle the more notorious guy(s).

You start things off with him in a beaten up, winded state, only to start cranking up the cut scene humor almost immediately. Blows are intercepted (well, Sonohigurashi and the player are both in range), then you proceed to Imperium Galactica is a turn-based game with a sci-fi theme, and is for people who love old school games, and turn based strategy. The game follows the theme of the Roman empire during the time of Queen Boudicca (Lady Boudicca) and the Romans vs. the tribes that lived in Roman Britannia (the USA, the rest of the UK, Iceland, Greenland and the rest of Europe) Classes: There are four classes in the game: Captain: The commander of a ships/fighter squadron/ship class. You can chose to play as a captain in various missions (mutually exclusive with Vice Captain and Commander), you can also craft squadron/ships and carriers, you can also captain fleets and divisions, and deciding who you want to pick up in bomber missions. Vice Captain: You are the vice commander of a ships/fighter squadron/ship class, but your focus is on fleet battles. You are also the strategist of the turn-based tactical combat between fighter squadrons. You can't craft carriers, but you can provide relief to your airforce by using your radar. You have an airfleet, and you can also provide relief to your fleet. Commander: You can choose to fight battles (mutually exclusive with Vice Captain and Vice Commander) or you can simply provide relief to your airfleet by using your radar. You can also craft carriers, and you can provide relief to your fleets. You control the fleets in combat. You can craft carriers and you can also provide relief to your fleet by using your radar. Note: Fleet Captain: You can also have bases. You can craft carriers, you can also provide relief to your fleet by using your radar. You can depending on how you start the game. For example, if you start the game in system1,1, you will have 3 bases, 2 in system 1 and 1 in system 2. If you start the game c9d1549cdd

What's new in Office Lovers:

Strong, brooding, something out of the ordinary. How about this DIG 4 Mask? An insane, trench-coat wearing cyclopean monolith of a thing. With tentacles that shoot out from around its face and head like the maw of a Gargantua of a sea-creature. On the other side of the spectrum we have this DIG 4 Lure. A chubby blob of a thing, barely 5 inches tall. Bolted to a chinstrap sorta thingy and it sprays off little eyes. Sturdy as much as the Lure is tiny though it can take quite a beating. So, come and take a peek at these two (the Lure won't be out till after Christmas), and while you're doing that, take a guess at what might come out in October! 03 July 2008 Tomorrow my first workshop for Litchdon Bespoke Arts will be on the beautiful Isle of Portland. I'm sure that will be lovely but I will also be doing an editing gig for a reality-type tv programme. Which is great, and which I'll post about later but the point of this mini-blog is that I've got a pattern to make! One to go with the four foot tall handbags that I am making for very nice people. Since then I've pulled together some pictures taken on my last outing there. Two each going to a couple of very special bookcases in fancy local bookshops. Exact plans weren't made as each is so personal but those Litchdon folks have been a pleasure to do business with. Real humans with real priorities. 11 June 2008 Panties. Haven't made any yet. Well, two pair. The Litchdon folks have asked me to make bookcases. Damn good at bookmaking, those Litchdon people are. The buyers are gonna be VERY pleased. Apparently the local bookshops have loads of old and new books for display. The Italian shop has the biggest collection ever for that shop, and we're going in tomorrow to look and pick up a couple of choice layouts for a "books for all ages" theme. Anyway, here are the two pairs I've made. The one on the left is one of the "standard" half doll patterns in DIG 4. Nothing fancy, not a lot of it really. But I've really digged this. I just love the concept and the colours

You are a survivor of The Zombie Apocalypse, and now you are in New Orleans. You and others must be the last living people, and you are the last hope for humanity. The weather has caused some strange phenomena to appear in the city, and somehow the undead have congregated. There are a few rules you must follow if you want to remain alive. When The Walking Dead: Saints & Sinners launches on March 21, 2012, for the PlayStation®3 computer entertainment system, Xbox 360® video game and entertainment system from Microsoft, and the PC, players will be immersed into a journey where you must make decisions that will ultimately change the way you look at life and death. You'll take on the role of a survivor in a world that is at its end. As a survivor in The Walking Dead: Saints & Sinners, you'll not only have to fight the undead to stay alive, but you'll have to interact with other survivors. You'll have to build relationships with these people, help them with their survival, and maybe even form alliances with them. For every person you make a relationship with, you will gain strength and evolve into a better survivor. You may even be tempted to save their life when they ask. The balance between surviving and helping others is critical to your survival. In The Walking Dead: Saints & Sinners, the story is driven through the first-person perspective as players traverse through a ruined city with 15 different areas of the game. Survivors will build relationships, talk to one another, and gain awareness of their surroundings to help create an engaging story that will keep you on your toes. They'll be in the city for the next 7 days so when they leave, they will take two different routes. One will take them to a relative's house, and the other to a gas station. Ultimately, one will survive and one will be spared. The survivors who arrive at the gas station will then be greeted by a dog, and the survivor who arrives at the dog's house will receive assistance from the owner of the house. If, for any reason, The Sheriff is the survivor who arrives at the gas station, they will meet an old friend who will join them on their journey to this unknown destination. In another fortunate event, the survivor who arrives at the dog's house will be spared. In addition to surviving the undead that move throughout the city, you will have to remain alive and operate as a well-respected person in the community. You'll be given job opportunities in the form
