Field of the Invention This invention relates to piston rod actuators and more particularly to piston rod actuators which are utilized in the regulation of the flow of hydraulic or other fluid under pressure, in a plurality of static and/or dynamic positions. 2. Description of the Prior Art There have been developed in the past rod-type hydraulic pressure regulators for various types of fluid pressure control applications. Such devices have comprised a sliding piston/cylinder unit which is acted upon by the fluid under controlled pressure, which unit slidingly moves a valving member such as a spool valve assembly. It has been the problem with such devices in the past that they have been considered basically one-piece mechanisms requiring that the entire piston and cylinder body be actuated in order to move the valving member and effect proper control of the fluid passing through the regulator. Prior art regulators are not readily adjustable and the fluid flow rate range is limited due to the dimensional limitations of the regulator housing. There has been in the past, for example, a need for a variable flow rate regulator having a variable capacity, the regulator adjustable from a minimum to a maximum fluid capacity without any mechanical part changes and which can be retro-fitted in existing systems; a need to have different operating ranges, a need to have a variable output flow rate range, and a need for a variable capacity regulator with a minimum of excess fluid flow in standby mode. There has also been a need for a variable capacity regulator in which one of the valving members is adjustable, which valving member can be attached to the regulator housing in such manner that it extends in a radial direction, so as to be capable of being adjusted in its longitudinal position. It is therefore the object of this invention to provide an improved piston rod-type regulator which meets all of

The Drosophila melanogaster insect appendage organ is a complex organ that comprises five pairs of appendages that are evolutionarily related to the five mammalian limbs. Similar to the mammalian inner ear, the insect ear is a sensory organ that involves mechanoreceptors and sense organs that process and transmit sensory stimuli. Molecular studies on the development of the fly ear provide evidence that the primary role of a gene is to regulate the expression of a second gene. The primary role of the housefly antennal appendage bHLH gene is to regulate the expression of the hedgehog (hh) gene, which is required for determining the outer ear morphologies. In Drosophila, the hh gene also regulates several other different developmental processes, including the development of the legs, wings, and antenna. The hh gene complex also produces proteins

Class I serine/threonine phosphatases have emerged as pivotal modulators of intracellular signaling. Here, we investigated the role of the catalytic subunits of protein phosphatase 2A (PP2A) in energy metabolism and cell growth of cancer cells. The specific ablation of the catalytic subunit of PP2A induced an increase in glycolysis and glycolytic capacity. It was accompanied by a switch in the expression pattern of glycolytic genes including the glucose transporter GLUT1 and several glycolytic enzymes in favor of those which are highly induced in response to hypoxic conditions in the absence of PP2A. Interestingly, the specific ablation of PP2A in breast cancer cells reduced their proliferation in vitro and in vivo, suppressed tumor growth and induced profound inhibition of tumor angiogenesis. Our results indicate that PP2A is crucially involved in energy metabolism and control of proliferation, growth and angiogenesis in breast cancer cells.Q: How to use jQuery with PHP I am new to jquery and php.
