Emulado.5000.0.0.99.61st Airborne Division (United States) The 61st Airborne Division is an inactive United States Army airborne division, last assigned to the 13th Airborne Corps, and was first activated in 1943 as the 75th Infantry Division. The division served in the European Theater of Operations during World War II, and was inactivated in September 1945. Activated The 75th Infantry Division was activated in July 1943 at Camp Claiborne, Louisiana. The division was formed from elements of the 36th, 44th and 90th Infantry Divisions and the rest of its personnel were drawn from combat units that had seen action at St. Nazaire, Oran, Kasserine Pass, and other engagements during the North African campaign, Operation Torch, and Operation Husky in Sicily. It was ordered into active training in January 1944. The unit first left Louisiana for Camp Patrick Henry, Virginia, and was sent to Camp Gordon, Georgia, in February. In April, they moved to Camp Blanding, Florida, to prepare for combat deployment to Europe. Deployment On 13 May 1944, the 75th Infantry Division landed in France as a follow-on force for the U.S. Third Army. The division moved through the British sector and on 2 June 1944, received the mission of penetrating the Siegfried Line. On 15 June, they advanced to the north of Flanders. For the next two months, the 75th Infantry Division conducted a fighting withdrawal and established three bridgeheads across the river Rhine. By early August, the Rhine had been crossed and the division advanced north. On 2 September, they crossed the Moselle at the town of Troisdorf. This was the first Allied crossing of the Moselle. Three days later the division crossed the Main and advanced to the Donauwörth, coming under the command of U.S. VII Corps. Between 9–10 September, the Allies penetrated the Hitler-Rhine Wall by crossing the Rhine, and by 21 September they were on the outskirts of Kassel. For the next two months, the division conducted operations to the south of Kassel and later south of Durlach. By
