Language.Diagnostic value of procalcitonin, serum amyloid A and C-reactive protein in patients with purulent pericarditis. The aim of this study was to evaluate and to compare the diagnostic value of procalcitonin (PCT), serum amyloid A (SAA) and C-reactive protein (CRP) for the early diagnosis of purulent pericarditis. Seventy-five patients with purulent pericarditis and 37 patients with sterile pericarditis were enrolled prospectively in this study. SAA, CRP and PCT were examined at the time of pericardial fluid collection. PCT and SAA values were significantly higher in the purulent pericarditis group than in the sterile pericarditis group. PCT had a positive predictive value of 81.8% and a negative predictive value of 93.8% in the diagnosis of purulent pericarditis. SAA had a positive predictive value of 92.3% and a negative predictive value of 93.5% in the diagnosis of purulent pericarditis. CRP had a positive predictive value of 81.8% and a negative predictive value of 78.9% in the diagnosis of purulent pericarditis. The diagnostic value of PCT in the diagnosis of purulent pericarditis was greater than that of SAA and CRP. The combination of PCT, CRP and SAA in the diagnosis of purulent pericarditis had greater sensitivity, negative predictive value and greater area under the receiver-operating characteristic curve

(AUC) than the combination of PCT, CRP and SAA alone. PCT, SAA and CRP are useful as an adjunct to clinical diagnosis in the early identification of patients with purulent pericarditis. PCT is a valuable biomarker for the diagnosis of purulent pericarditis, however, the combination of PCT, CRP and SAA is more valuable.

ing in her hand. I pulled the trigger. The gun was a 9mm. I never thought I'd be able to pull off the shots she took. I missed. But she got the ball. Then I saw Lacy and I was in trouble. "Help me!" I shouted. A man came running toward me. "What happened?" "He's been shot,"
