Reduced rate of hepatocellular carcinoma in patients with cirrhosis after transplantation of partial liver grafts. Since the graft size was reported to be a significant risk factor for hepatocellular carcinoma (HCC) recurrence after liver transplantation, we evaluated the impact of graft size on HCC recurrence after liver transplantation. Ninety-six patients transplanted with partial liver grafts were enrolled and divided into two groups. Patients of group A (group A, N = 34) had grafts with a 50% weight of the total liver, and patients of group B (group B, N = 62) had grafts with a 100% weight of the total liver. The recipient and donor characteristics and the immunosuppression regimens were well-matched in both groups. Recurrent HCC was more common in group A (10/34) than in group B (4/62; $p = 0.0392$). Graft size (50% weight) was correlated with tumor recurrence in group B ($p = 0.0305$). The cumulative probability of HCC recurrence was higher in group A than in group B ($p = 0.0046$) and was correlated with the transplantation period ($p = 0.0405$). The detection of HCC recurrence was significantly earlier in group B than in group A ($p = 0.0239$) and was associated with tumor size at first recurrence ($p = 0.0002$). The transplantation of partial grafts is associated with a lower rate of HCC recurrence than of whole grafts. In particular, HCC recurrence should be considered less likely in patients with cirrhosis that undergo liver transplantation using a partial graft with a weight of 50% or more of the total liver. w h e n f o u r 6d1f23a050
