BlueStacks V0.8.5.3042

Download

BlueStacks already does a lot of things very well, but there was one flaw. With BlueStacks 3, when you unplug the computer the apps that were running on it would get killed and not come back for the next session. This is no longer a problem as all of BlueStacks' apps are built to be shared across multiple devices. You simply use BlueStacks to sign in with Google, access your Gmail, Twitter, YouTube, etc. and all of your games and apps will be there. BlueStacks v4's collection of features is extensive and surprisingly very similar to how BlueStacks 3 worked. In fact, most of the same apps work. There are some significant UI changes, but nothing too drastic. However, we are seeing a lot of interest in BlueStacks from eSports and VR gamers as we roll out the official Beta for those, so expect more of that in the coming days. While we talked about performance and more features, lets talk a bit about the UI. BlueStacks 4 is built with Angular, a new angular library by Google. BlueStacks 4 uses a Material Design theme and also allows users to create their own themes. This is a major change for BlueStacks. Up until this version, BlueStacks 3 didn't have a UI and the UI that was there wasn't really usable. BlueStacks 4 has a much easier to use UI that is designed to help you play mobile games and access your apps just like a traditional PC. BlueStacks 4 is only in Beta and we're still ironing out a few things, but it is coming along very nicely. The biggest change we're working on is the collection of apps. BlueStacks 3 only had a few things available. Now we have BlueStacks, Google, Drive, Youtube, and Chrome.

BlueStacks V0.8.5.3042

BlueStacks 4 has a new UI and its going to be a beautiful thing. It's a lot more modern, and even though BlueStacks 3 was already pretty good, it didn't have the layout or design to make it really great. Now if you're asking yourself 'So what can I do with BlueStacks 4?', we have several main areas of usage. The first is the ability to use your phone as a controller. As I mentioned before, this means that you can use your mobile device as a controller for your PC. The offline Google Play feature will be available in the App Repository V3.5 in May 2018 and the App Repository V3.6 in June 2018. The App Repository is a core component of the BlueStacks environment and allows you to run and manage apps not hosted in Google Play, and manage app updates.

BlueStacks 4.0.8.3042 includes the Android Edition 4.4.43 API. The new IntelliJ IDEA 11 Beta includes a build version for BlueStacks 4 with API level 31 (Android Edition 5.0). The BlueStacks UI in IDEA 11 continues to improve and become a more cohesive, consistent, and visual experience. The Android Edition 4.4.43 API level 31 is expected in May 2018 and will allow developers to use Android Nougat APIs to improve their apps and games. The new BlueStacks UI in IDEA 11 will be able to deliver them to users in the same way as Google Play for Android. These features will be released as BlueStacks 4.0.8.3042 in May 2018. In the interim, these features are included in BlueStacks 4.0.8.3034 for PC, BlueStacks 4.0.8.3035 for Mac, and BlueStacks Inside 3.0.0.3134 for Steam. The offline Google Play feature will be available in the App Repository V3.5 in May 2018 and the App Repository V3.6 in June 2018. The App Repository is a core component of the BlueStacks environment and allows you to run and manage apps not hosted in Google Play, and manage app updates.
