Dying Light Key Generator

It would seem that work on Dying Light 2 is finally coming to an end. Not only is the game staring to be closer to the release date than Dying Light, but Techland itself seems to have everything ready to launch the sequel. For one, the studio has just hired a new writer. Something that Dying Light 2 was rumoured to lack. The new idea will be used not only for the script itself but also for the game design, because the team will try to make it as close as possible to the ideas and concepts expressed in Dying Light. We're talking about parkour, and the idea of being an Expansion Pack for Dying Light. The fight and the parkour have much in common, and we have a feeling that this type of gameplay will make its way into the new game. If the game were out, though, we'd be in a really bad position. As of today, we've only seen a trailer for Dying Light 2 and not a single gameplay-specific preview, so it will be hard to tell how it'll fare in comparison to the original. To be fair, it's not like we're not seeing Dying Light 2 every day. Although the first one came out just two years ago, now we're expected to wait until December 2016 to see what they've done in that time. The delay could have been because they're still working on it, or it might be a sign of quality assurance problems, which they've already had. There was also a Splinter Cell game in the works that never saw the light of day, though it's unclear if that's the same project as this one. The team reportedly had a good time working on it, but they're not sure when they'll be able to spend more time on the series.
