Graphpad Prism 6 Keygen 13

each marker or line in the graphpad diagram contains both the parameters (columns) and the data (rows). for example, the column representing the x variable specifies the independent variable, column representing the y variable specifies the dependent variable, and row representing the data for the specific observation in the experiment. when a data set involves more than one data point, the column containing the independent variable and the column containing the dependent variable are called plot variables. the two additional columns are called plot variables to denote their role in the graph. the plot variables are displayed in the plot graph in different colors to denote the independent variable and dependent variable. graphpad prism has a unique feature called the "plot value", which is the actual point in the graph where the graph data is at its apex. the plot value of the data is marked with a red dot in the plot graph. the plot value is set when you specify an equation for the data using the prism equation editor. all data are expressed as mean  $\pm$  standard error. each experiment was performed at least three times. student t-test or one-way anova with dunnett's test were used for statistical analysis. all statistical analyses were performed using graphpad prism 6 software (graphpad software, inc., usa). a p 5ec8ef588b
