Save your work before quitting, or you may lose changes. Creating graphics and animations is easy with MATLAB graphic tools. Build your own graphics or animator from a library of controls and tools. Use the Run command in any command window to start an application or script. Run the code from a separate window or MATLAB menu option. The Run menu item opens an editor which is used for writing and viewing scripts. MATLAB now includes a web-based publishing tool that makes it easy to quickly create manuscripts in multiple file formats, including HTML and LaTeX. The published documents also include viewer.html, which you can use to preview the document within a web browser. MATLAB now supports CPLEX 10.2, the latest version of the MOSEK Optimization Software. Improved modelling capabilities including new solvers and increasing the number of methods available for advanced modelling. A change in the FPU design of MATLAB 2009 makes function calls, memory deallocations, and other FPU operations more efficient. This may improve performance for some functions. Note that the issue is not addressed in the release that includes FPU, the array changes introduced in Release 2010a. The.NET runtime library in MATLAB Release 2010b is necessary for users to take advantage of the new functionality that includes performance profiling, memory optimizer, and the recent tool boxes. The.NET runtime is distributed as part of the release package and is not an additional download. The Matlab installer for Mac OS X includes the X11 version of the MATLAB application. The X11 server supports the use of a number of display managers such as fwm2, kde, and openbox. On Windows, the MATLAB installer includes the X11 version of the MATLAB application.
