Flickr Smart makes sure that's true for all your photos, no matter what kind of story you're trying to tell." With more than 175 million monthly visitors, the photo- and video-sharing community of Flickr has enjoyed unprecedented growth in both its number of users and capabilities over the last 8 years. The site has grown with more than 74 million people using and creating great new images and videos every day. But up until now, Flickr's intelligence relied on human data gatherers to help it make educated guesses about whom, when and what users would want to share. Adobe has reinvented its print features with the introduction of new print connectors the new Adobe Print dialog. The company says the new Print dialog provides an improved user interface with "single click to preview" for print jobs, as well as the ability to open print jobs from a shared environment, making it easier to collaborate on Editions and print projects. The new 'add to collection' option for creating layer groups slightly changes the way you create layers, it's now "add to" instead of "add to collection, and you can now discretely add layers to the shelf included in an existing collection.
